

UNCRC stands for the United Nations Convention on the Rights of a Child.

It's a list of rights that all children, everywhere in the world, have.

The rights on this list are all the things that children and young people need to make sure that they are healthy, happy and safe.

There are 54 articles in the list and 42 of these are rights for children.

(The others are about how adults and governments should work together to make sure all children get all their rights).
